FORMER BEAR
GETS 15 YEARS ON DRUG-TRAFFICKING CONVICTION

Chicago Tribune

DALLAS Former Bears player Sam Hurd, who rose from the rough San Antonio streets to the NFL, was sentenced Wednesday to 15 years in prison for his role in trying to set up a massive drug operation spanning three states.

Hurd, 28, pleaded guilty in April to one count of conspiring to possess and distribute cocaine and marijuana, just days before his trial was set to begin. He was charged with drug conspiracy, accused of conspiring to possess with the intent to distribute cocaine and marijuana beginning in July 2011 and until June 6, 2012.

U.S. District Judge Jorge Solis noted that Hurd's activity did not include many actual drug deals and was instead mostly "agreements." Still, he described the scenario as "a tragedy" because Hurd—who had no criminal history, risked all he has earned since rising from poverty

"For some reason you chose to go another route and go down the drug trafficking route," Solis told Hurd in a courtroom half-filled with Hurd's family and friends. "You wanted to get into it in a big way. You didn't just start nickel and diming it."

When he heard the sentence, the former Northern Illinois player dropped his head and let out a sigh of relief and tears. Minutes earlier, he gave an emotional, if somewhat rambling, 30-minute plea apologizing for what he has done and describing in detail how he is trying to improve himself. He said he never has used or sold cocaine.

"I have a lot of regrets," said Hurd, his thin 6-foot-3 frame in an orange jump suit. "I regret not thinking about the consequences."

Hurd, a popular player with teammates for his hard work and friendly personality, was arrested in December 2011 outside a Morton's steakhouse near Chicago after accepting a kilogram of cocaine from an undercover officer. It was inside a bag labeled, "Happy birthday."

Inside the restaurant, prosecutors alleged, Hurd told the officer and an informant that he wanted to buy 5 to 10 kilograms of cocaine and 1,000 pounds of marijuana weekly to distribute. He claimed he already was distributing 4 kilograms a week but wanted more.

Once outside, he was arrested within moments, capping months of investigation. The Bears subsequently released him in the middle of a three-year $5 million contract. Teammates, coaches and friends expressed shock at the arrest.

THE ACCOMPLICES

Two others also have pleaded guilty to related drug charges. Jesse Tyrone Chavful, Hurd's cousin with a long criminal history, already has pleaded guilty to one federal drug charge and was sentenced to eight years in prison. Chavful has since appealed his sentence. Toby Lujan, who managed a garage in Texas frequented by NFL players, also pleaded guilty and is set to be sentenced in January.

Pump up the holiday jams

redeye
@lovefromthbrain

It's Christmastime! Can't you hear the music?

As I wander through retail stores for my various shopping needs, I notice that the standard rotation of acceptable pop music jams has been updated to include holiday music. And not just any holiday: It's Christmas!

I know some people will say, "Christmas music now? It shouldn't start until after Thanksgiving." And to those people I say, "Bah, humbug!" It's never too early for Christmas. Especially if your bottom line depends on it.

Jesus may be the reason for the season, but we celebrate by giving gifts to each other. And nine times out of 10, those gifts are bought at stores.

Maybe it's the hustler in me, but I know the weeks between Thanksgiving and Christmas Eve are crucial to the bottom line in the retail world. This short period of time can make or break a year. According to the National Retail Federation, the holiday season can represent as much as 40 percent of annual sales for some retailers.

Stores need to get bodies through the doors. They are opening earlier and closing later, and some are not closing at all. We have seen Black Friday start at 6 a.m., then 4 a.m., then midnight, and now it no longer exists because this year some stores will open at 8 p.m. on Thanksgiving Day. Why?

Because in 2012 alone, holiday sales represented 19.3 percent of total retail industry sales.

I repeat, stores need to get bodies through the doors. Store managers who have mastered retail zen and understand the fundamental precept of "train the mind and the body will follow" began training the mind last week ... with Christmas music.

Whether it is Elvis singing "Blue Christmas," Bruce Hornsby crooning "Lost in the Snow" or Wham! belting out "Last Christmas," when you hear it, you know that time is upon us. You begin to think about what Dad wants, what little Keisha needs and what to get the boo this year. While you verbalize your disgust for the early arrival of Christmas music, you silently wish you were part of the 40 percent who started their shopping before Halloween.

Personally, I love Christmas music. For 60-plus days, I get a reprieve from twerking, jerking, booty-shaking, murderous, cheesy romance music and am engulfed in tunes about joy, sharing, caring, peace on Earth and good will toward man.

My only complaint with the holiday jams is that I wish there were more original Christmas songs. But with Kelly Clarkson, Mary J. Blige, Jewel, Tamar Braxton and Bad Religion all dropping Christmas collections this season, I'm sure to find an original jam I like. If not, I can always rely on the Rat Pack and Mariah Carey. All she wants for Christmas is me.

 Ugh, OK then

A government watchdog group is calling on Mayor Emanuel to end the city's tradition of pushing off massive debt payments.

MORE COPS OR MORE OT?

SOME ON COUNCIL CHALLENGE CITY BUDGET PRIORITIES

Chicago Tribune

Self-styled independent aldermen challenged key portions of Mayor Emanuel's 2014 spending plan Wednesday, but if the pushback to their ideas is any indication, they may have a hard time gaining traction.

Southwest Side Ald. Ricardo Munoz (22nd) unveiled a proposal to use $25 million to hire an additional 500 police officers, saying that makes more sense than the mayor's plan to hold police manpower steady next year and instead set aside $71 million to pay those officers overtime to bolster the number of cops on the street as the city tries to clamp down on gun violence.

The City Council's progressive caucus previously had floated the possibility of hiring an additional 1,000 police officers next year, but Munoz said aldermen weren't able to identify enough money to get that far. "It's what we could find," he said. "It's unrealistic to say 1,000 [new officers] when you can only find $25 million."

City budget officials have taken the position that it's less expensive to increase police overtime than to add to the ranks, saying it costs $63 an hour to put a cop on overtime on the street but $89 an hour to put a full-time officer to work once benefits are taken into account.

In past years, the mayor has shown a willingness to compromise at the margins on his budgets, but Emanuel budget spokeswoman Kelley Quinn on Wednesday reiterated the administration's reasons for relying on overtime.

Mayor Emanuel talks with aldermen before the City Council meeting on Wednesday. HANCOCK/STONETRI-BUNE

"We will continue to meet with aldermen to discuss their ideas on public safety and explain the strategies being deployed by the police department to reduce crime across the city," Quinn said in an email in response to Munoz's proposal. "The strategic use of overtime allows us to maximize every dollar available toward that effort."

Munoz announced his idea the same day progressive caucus aldermen unsuccessfully tried to get a hearing on a plan to move about $200 million in unencumbered special property tax money out of geographically organized development funds and put it back in the general budgets of the Chicago Public Schools, City Hall and other governments.

CULTURAL CENTER NAME CHANGE?

Ald. James Balcer (11th) introduced a plan to rename the Chicago Cultural Center to honor Eleanor "Sis" Daley, wife of Mayor Richard J. Daley and mother of Mayor Richard M. Daley. Sis Daley was credited with helping save the Michigan Avenue building, which at the time was Chicago Public Library's central building.

THE DIGIT

That is the annual fee downtown horse carriage operators would have to pay under a plan put forward by Mayor Emanuel on Wednesday that also would change the rules dictating the temperatures at which the horses can work. Currently, operators pay a one-time fee.

Homicides from Oct. 30 to 4 p.m. Wednesday. All homicides had one victim except the Laflin location, which had two.

CHICAGO VIOLENCE
ONE CITY UNDER THE GUN

West Englewood has logged five homicides so far this month, including a double homicide last week, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

An 18-year-old man was found shot to death Monday in the 5900 block of South Winchester Avenue, according to officials.

Five days earlier, two 28-year-old men were shot to death in the 7300 block of South Laflin Street, police said.

On Nov. 3, a man was fatally shot in the 6500 block of South Bishop Street, according to officials.

One day earlier, a 27-year-old man was shot to death in the 6500 block of South Hermitage Avenue, police said.

West Englewood has logged 20 homicides so far this year. The South Side community area recorded 19 homicides last year, RedEye determined.

In the last two weeks, Auburn Gresham and West Garfield Park each have recorded two homicides.

Citywide, gunshot homicides have also been logged in the last two weeks in Belmont Cragin, Chicago Lawn, East Garfield Park, Englewood, the Lower West Side and West Pullman, according to RedEye data.

Meanwhile, a 31-year-old woman was stabbed to death Nov. 3 in the 4400 block of South Richmond Street in Brighton Park, police said.

Fourteen homicides have been recorded so far this month. Thirty-eight homicides were logged in November 2012, RedEye determined.

Toronto Mayor Rob Ford admitted Wednesday he has bought illegal drugs in the past two years.

REUTERS

Mayor admits to buying illegal drugs

TORONTO Toronto's embattled mayor, Rob Ford, professed a zero-tolerance policy for drugs and gangs on Wednesday, but he also admitted he has bought illegal drugs in the past two years.

Speaking after the Toronto City Council almost unanimously urged Ford to take a break from his duties, Ford said he could not change the past and would continue his efforts as mayor to save Toronto money.

Asked if he had bought illegal drugs in the past two years, he replied somberly: "Yes, I have."

Ford last week admitted that he smoked crack cocaine "while in a drunken stupor," and Wednesday's call from the council came in its first meeting since that admission.

An Ipsos-Reid poll published Wednesday showed that 76 percent of Toronto voters believe Ford should step down or take a leave of absence.

"Over the last six months and especially the last few weeks we have grown increasingly concerned by the seemingly endless cycle of allegations, denials and belated admissions about your behavior," City Councillor Jaye Robinson read from a nonbinding petition signed by 30 of the city's 44 councillors, and passed by a vote of 41 to 2.

That petition is separate from a motion yet to be voted on that asks Ford to take a leave of absence and apologize for "misleading" Toronto residents. The council has no power to force the mayor to step down or take a break unless he is convicted of a crime.

"Our city's reputation has been damaged and continues to suffer," Robinson said. "Together we stand to ask you to step aside and take a leave of absence to address your challenges privately outside of the public eye."

Relatively few sign up for Obamacare

About 106,000 people signed up for insurance coverage nationally under President Obama's health care law during October, the government said Wednesday, a tiny fraction of the millions of people that had been expected to enroll for next year.

LAX shooting suspect condition improves

The medical condition of a man who was shot by police after allegedly opening fire at Los Angeles International Airport earlier this month has improved, and he is no longer in a critical condition, the Los Angeles Times reported.

Hawaii legalizes same-sex marriage

Hawaii's governor on Wednesday signed into law a bill extending marriage rights to same-sex couples in the state, long popular as a wedding and honeymoon destination and regarded as a pioneer in advancing the cause of gay matrimony.

Honeymoon's over

Every coach breaks your heart sooner or later. Wait for it ...

Alex Quigley

» @alexquigley

Bears coach Marc Trestman broke a lot of Chicago hearts Sunday.

By leaving in a clearly injured Jay Cutler at quarterback instead of opting for clearly capable backup Josh McCown, he may have cost the Bears the game and, due to tiebreakers and other injuries, a feasible shot at a division title.

It was the first real gaffe of Trestman's young NFL coaching career, signaling the end of his honeymoon. But every Chicago coach has his fall from grace, and some were far worse than Trestman's.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR ALEX QUIGLEY CAN BE HEARD ON WGN RADIO 720.

Lovie Smith

Smith was extremely poor at coach's challenges early in his career, although his success rate improved in later years. But it was hard to stomach Dec. 13, 2009, against Green Bay, when Smith called a timeout to watch a replay of an obviously correct referee's call, then immediately squandered a second timeout by throwing his red flag.

Or perhaps the first time he said "Rex is our quarterback." Or the time he left Carolina receiver Steve Smith in single coverage in the 2005 playoffs. Just a rich tapestry there.

Tim Floyd

Accepted the Bulls head coach position on July 23, 1998. Yes, that's it.

Lou Piniella

For some fans it wasn't until Sweet Lou literally quit on the team midseason in 2010, but for most it was his 2007 NLDS Game 1 decision to pull Carlos Zambrano after only six innings and 85 pitches (!!!) in a 1-1 tie. Piniella later said he was saving his workhorse pitcher for Game 4 work. There was no Game 4.

Ozzie Guillen

Guillen's 2005 World Series title earned him mucho political capital among White Sox fans, but using a nasty F-word in 2006 to describe a columnist cost him some. The rest of it was frittered away by an aging roster and his tweets, so let's call it "the day he joined Twitter."

Dusty Baker

Instead of calming his melting-down pitcher with a stroll to the mound in the bottom of the eighth in the 2003 NLCS ... y'know what? Still too soon. I can't.

Joel Quenneville

On March 26, 2009, Quenneville almost shaved his mustache. Luckily, Stache was able to talk his way out of that one.

1	Who or what will be the target of Brandon Marshall's next rant?	Restaurants that claim sandwiches are "piled high" but are barely stacked moderately. False advertising!	A shiny forehead at the next press conference. MAKEUP!	RedEye. If everyone else answers this question the right way.	Fashion. They do it every week on that "Fashion Police" show and people seem to eat it up.	Joe Flacco. They paid him? Now I know Jay is getting paid! Me too!
2	Besides the Lions' play, what else in sports is "disgusting" and "borderline illegal"?	Constantly putting Cowboys games in prime time. Nobody (outside Dallas) cares.	Currently I would go with B.J. Raji of the Packers. Super disgusting.	Brandon Boelig's face without a beard.	Disgusting? The bathrooms at Wrigley Field. Borderline illegal? The price of a beer at the stadium.	Right now, it's Bama football. Disgustingly good, and that should be illegal.
3	What should Derrick Rose do for his injured hamstring?	Mud bath, hydrotherapy, cucumber mousse, whatever. Just get better, man.	Oh I dunno, take the next few months off?	Stretch it out by kicking people who are complaining about him being injured.	Call Michael Vick and Darren McFadden and see what they recommend ... then do the total opposite.	Remember what his last hamstring led to.
4	How did Andrew Shaw celebrate his two-year extension with the Hawks?	One goal: drinking a six-pack out of his skate in less than 5 minutes. What do you mean, "Why?"	Drank champagne out of the Stanley Cup. Oh wait, he already did that!	Since he's The Mutt, he probably humped someone's leg.	You know, I'm finally learning more about this "hockey" thing. Still not going to answer this question, though.	New teeth, sticks and some body contact. #hattrick
5	Getting a tax break for renovating Wrigley Field is like the secret tax break I get for answering this question. Please don't say anything.	... Joan Rivers getting another face lift.	... getting a bonus to be Bieber's bodyguard—a way to get someone to do a thankless job.	... the wealthiest 1 percent in the nation paying lower tax rates. It just sounds ... weird and not right.	... giving Usain Bolt a head start. Doesn't really need it, but who's not going to take it?

Knock on Wood

How do you make good beer better? Just add bourbon barrels

By Kate Bernot | REDEYE

It was dark and cold at 3 a.m. on a March morning when Josh Galecki, 32, of Logan Square, arrived at Founders Brewing Co. in Grand Rapids, Mich., and already the pack of self-professed beer nerds snaked around the building, nearly 300 people deep. Galecki was prepared, though, having lined up in years past to get his hands on the brewery's coveted Kentucky Breakfast stout, released at the brewery one day a year, before a few very rare bottles hit store shelves.

This is the type of devotion that bourbon barrel-aged beers inspire. ("My wife now thinks I'm insane," Galecki added.) Left to rest for months inside used bourbon barrels, these beers have for decades been popular among craft beer devotees, but in the last two to three years, hype has reached staggering levels.

The 11th annual Festival of Wood and Barrel Aged Beers, the country's largest event focused on wood-aged beers, will take place in Bridgeport on Saturday. A few years ago, the event took weeks to sell out. This year? Mere minutes.

"Demand doesn't seem to be dying down, but I don't know where you can go from here," said Chris Quinn, owner of Avondale craft beer store The Beer Temple. "I guess you could sell out FOBAB in 10 seconds next year."

Chicago sits squarely at the center of the modern barrel-aged beer frenzy. Goose Island

Beer Co. practically invented the style in the early 1990s with its Bourbon County Brand stout, which continues to be a standard-bearer. South suburban Flossmoor Station Brewery also was a pioneer.

"Taste a bourbon barrel-aged beer, Quinn said, and it's not difficult to find the reason for its popularity. "You don't have to sit there and pick out the subtle nuances," he said. "It kind of smacks you in the face with flavor."

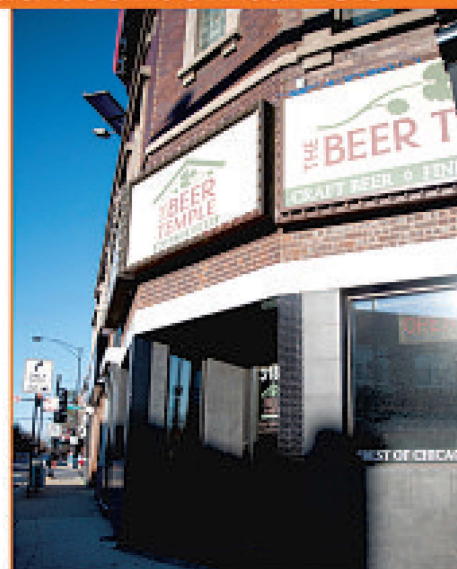

Because the beer—traditionally a dark style like a stout—rests in used whiskey barrels for months, it absorbs some of the flavor of the spirit as well as the semi-porous wood. Charred oak, cherry and vanilla notes are common characteristics heightened by time in a bourbon barrel.

As more breweries get in on the trend, though, new styles emerge. The next wave of barrel-aging includes non-traditional styles such as pale ales and ciders, plus the use of rum and wine barrels.

At Evanston-based Temperance Beer Company—whose beers will be available in Chicago beginning next week—brewer Claudia Jendron looks forward to brewing a barrel-aged black IPA, as well as creating small-batch versions of the brewery's flagship beers.

"It will be nice when we start our barrel aging that we'll get these smaller, 10-gallon barrels that allow me to make a couple of one-offs of our beers," Jendron said. "Here's our porter with cherries; here's our porter with a ton more chicory. It's cool to do those experimentations."

As with any experiment, though, there are some risks for breweries, especially when it comes to barrel-aging new styles.

"It's a big jump to take, considering the cost-efficiency and time and effort," Jendron said. "It's kind of tricky, because you're taking beer out of its normal conditions and putting it into a barrel where you don't necessarily know what's been going on. Luckily, people have done enough barrel-aging that there are some guidelines."

It's precisely this risk-reward balance, though, that makes successful barrel-aged beers so coveted.

"They're trophies to some people, absolutely," Quinn said of beer collectors. "People are just really into the hunt itself and acquiring these beers."

Once a desirable bottle has been found, many collectors choose to keep the beer for months or years to allow the flavors to mellow and develop even further before opening the bottle.

Galecki, who estimates he has a cellar of at least 200 bottles, saves his rarest bottles for special occasions or for sharing with other beer obsessives. One of his treasures is a vintage barrel-aged Dark Lord imperial stout from Munster, Ind.-based Three Floyds Brewing, of which only about 500 were produced. This winter, though, he thinks he'll finally have a reason to crack it open.

"My wife and I are having a baby in December and I thought, 'What better way to celebrate the birth than by opening this bottle?'"

ABEL URBIBE/TRIBUNE

Tango passion martini ($9)
at La Taberna Tapas
1301 S. Halsted St. 312-243-9988

Much of La Taberna Tapas' menu stays true to traditional Spanish fare and the beverage list is no exception. The wine list focuses primarily on Spain, featuring types such as albarino and tempranillo sold by the glass or bottle, though there are a few California options to add some variation. Even the classic sangria ($8 glass, $25 pitcher) remains rooted in the past, with red wine, brandy from Jerez (in Andalusia) and citrus. The cocktail list, though, transports the diner from Europe to South America, with drinks such as the tango passion martini. In an attempt to replicate orujo—a brandy distilled from the grape bits leftover from making wine—Spanish settlers in Peru and Chile created their own version, known today as pisco. La Taberna combines pisco with orange liqueur for a beverage with quite a kick, but the alcohol is masked by a sweet, tropical puree of passion fruit and blood orange. A splash of cava gives the cocktail a lighter quality, which makes it perfect for pairing with everything on La Taberna's food menu. TRIBUNE

"I really do believe that Shonda is like our Shakespeare. She's that prolific and that insightful. She understands human nature in that, you know, once-in-a-generation way. She can hook your heart on character and pull you through like a kaleidoscope of story masterfully that I think very few people could pull off. The quality of this writing is staggering."

"We do pageants in the South. And I think for sure that instills a certain like sense of decorum that Mellie definitely calls on frequently. Sense of propriety, you know? ... Yale was the first time that I was like, 'Oh, ... the world is big.' If you can dream it, you can do it. ... BELLAMY

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

Sure, Washington shoulders the weight of the show much like Olivia keeps the gladiators of Pope and Associates on task to "handle" D.C. scandals. Yet Young is causing a stir with fans thanks to water-cooler moments. There was the "whore" speech, the "drunk Mellie" scene and the plotting with White House Chief of Staff Cyrus Beene (Jeff Perry).

The tough, brilliant and manipulative Mellie has become one of the most polarizing characters in recent TV history, so much so it makes you wonder if Young has become creator/writer Shonda Rhimes' favorite cast member.

"No," Young said during a recent interview, laughing. "Because she gives [great moments] to all of us. It's very equitably portioned. But you do think, 'Oh my Lord, I'm the luckiest girl this week.'"

Luck must have been shining on Young again for the appropriately titled "Everything's Coming Up Mellie," airing at 9 p.m. Thursday on ABC. The episode flashes back 14 years, before Fitz and Mellie were political powerhouses. In the present scenes, Mellie still hasn't recovered from the backlash of her accidentally recorded

So much happens in one episode of ABC's hit drama "Scandal" that it's hard to point a finger at one actor and say "scene-stealer." Yet Bellamy Young has been something of a thief this season.

Born and raised in North Carolina and educated at Yale and Oxford, Young plays ambitious first lady Mellie Grant, who is unhappily but pragmatically entangled in a love triangle between her husband, President Fitzgerald Grant (Tony Goldwyn), and Olivia Pope (Kerry Washington), his former campaign manager and the best crisis manager in Washington, D.C.

jibes against Congresswoman Josephine Marcus (Lisa Kudrow), so she decides to do an interview to get back into the public's good graces.

ABC is notoriously tight-lipped on details, but Young said the flashbacks to when Fitz and Mellie were "in the cute love" tell a story that will help viewers understand the resonance of the characters' present actions. In other words, we get to see where everything went wrong.

"Well, that's up to you to decide, right? Exactly. But you're definitely going to see where it all changed," Young teased. "I think the most fun thing to watch is how this union [Fitz and Mellie] went from a normal happy couple to being very swiftly put on the conveyor belt of politics and in the spotlight. And the things that bond you can also wind up dividing you, ultimately."

The episode was especially challenging but also rewarding for Young, because she carries much of the episode's drama, she said, the way Washington does much of the time. During the shoot, Young kept thinking to herself, "What would Kerry do? I'll handle it like Kerry does."

"She's such a great leader," Young said. "She can be fully present for everyone all the time. She's the best mentor in the world."

Young, who has had small or recurring roles in several TV shows including "Criminal Minds" and "Scrubs," still pinches herself to make sure she's still on "Scandal." After all, her character was supposed to appear in just three episodes in the first season. Rhimes wanted to write a presidential divorce story, but three seasons in, Mellie is the person fans love to hate.

"I've been sort of dancing around a long time with this whole life and this career and I've been so blessed because I've never had to do anything else," said Young, a Broadway veteran who is recording her first album this month. "But I don't think I could have even dreamed a blessing as big as this job. And then they gave me a script like this. ... The writers gave me, seriously, the greatest gift of my life."

Bellamy Young

‘Scandal’s’ scandalous moments

One of “Scandal” star Bellamy Young’s favorite speeches as first lady Mellie Grant comes in Thursday’s episode, titled “Everything’s Coming Up Mellie.” We can’t really talk about what happens—but Young did tell us why she loved the moment.

“It’s amazing how Mellie keeps trying to find the limit of how many concessions she can live with,” she wrote in an email. “And often, as is the case here I think, she finds out it’s a bridge too far even as the offer is being made.”

Tune in to ABC at 9 p.m. Thursday to find out what the speech is all about. Until then, here are her Top 4 “Mellie moments.” c.w.

Hunting Season
Season 2, Episode 3

What happened: Mellie discovers that Fitz met secretly with Olivia during a hunting trip.

Quotes: “I need to make some plans for my political future. And I do have a bright, bright political future. A sweet lawyer who gave up her career for her husband, suffered a miscarriage then had a late-in-life baby while first lady. That’s gold. That’s a future president. That’s a hell of a second act. And America loves a second act!” and “Get. Over. Her. You see her again and I’ll blow you away, and I’m an excellent shot, remember.”

Why Young chose it: “It was fun to finally let the subtext be the text. Very loudly.”

The Other Woman
Season 2, Episode 2

What happened: Mellie goes to the funeral visitation for a high-profile pastor who died while cheating on his wife. She kicks everyone out of the room, including Olivia, to talk to his wife.

Quote: “You are his wife. Some mistress doesn’t change that. He made a mistake, you have to forgive him for it. You weren’t wrong about him. You were just stronger than he was. And he’s not a monster, he’s the man you fell in love with. ... You are his wife, right to the end. Be his wife.”

Why Young chose it: “That felt like the speech Mellie has to give herself every day in order to soldier on.”

Snake in the Garden
Season 2, Episode 17

What happened: Mellie halts a visit from the older Grant children, Jerry and Karen, leading Fitz to suggest she’s a bad mom. Mellie’s not having it, telling him they do not want to come for the weekend because Fitz has turned into his alcoholic father.

Quote: “And maybe I’m cold. And maybe I don’t have the mother gene. And maybe a thousand other things that make me such a horrible, villainous bitch in your book, but in Jerry and Karen’s book, I’m still their mom.”

Why Young chose it: “That was an unbelievably loving tirade. Have you ever been so mad at someone because you loved them so much and saw them so off course? It was a gift to get to walk that tightrope in a network TV drama.”

Mrs. Smith Goes to Washington
Season 3, Episode 3

What happened: Mellie gets drunk and tells her husband why she is happy Olivia wasn’t killed by a bomber.

Quote: “If your whore had died today, brave and strong protecting a congressman inside the Capitol with the nation watching. ... The worship you would feel for the rest of your days, down on your knees praying to Saint Olivia Pope ... I’d lose our little war. I’d lose. I am spectacular, but I can’t compete with religious fervor.”

Why Young chose it: “Being tipsy let Mellie have an unguarded moment. It was nice to take the armor off for a bit. It also let us see a glimpse of the connection she and Fitz used to have. She used to be fun. They used to be fun. Now it’s all so complicated.”

‘Scrubs’ star returns to TV

MCT
Some people get into acting for the attention or the money or the chance to be someone else. But John C. McGinley joined to tell stories.

The McGinley home was a gathering place for neighborhood kids who often would join him and his four siblings for dinner. If you went back for seconds, his mother insisted on two rules: You had to clean your plate and you had to tell a story.

“I thought journalism or sports journalism was going to be the entry into that storytelling capacity, but journalism led me to be an actor,” says McGinley, who co-starred as the taskmaster Dr. Cox for 9½ years on “Scrubs.”

When he told his parents he wanted to act, his dad’s reaction stunned him. “It was the most empowering thing I’ve ever heard. He said, ‘If you’re going to do this, be great at it.’ It gives me chills saying it.”

With 70 films and 200 episodes of “Scrubs” under his belt, the last thing he longed to do was another TV show. But on Thursday, Mc-

9 p.m. Thursday, TBS

Ginley returns in TBS’ new comedy, “Ground Floor.”

While series work often is more convenient than working in film for actors, McGinley says, “I was doing something even better than a series for a guy who has a life, I was just having my life because ‘Scrubs’ had afforded me that luxury. I wasn’t all revved up about sprinting back into this grind, to tell you the truth.”

TODAY IN THE YEAR ...

- 1935: President Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed the Philippine Islands a free commonwealth.
- 1972: The Dow Jones Industrial Average closed above the 1,000 level for the first time.
- 1993: Puerto Rico residents voted in a plebiscite to maintain the island's existing U.S. commonwealth status, derailing the efforts of those favoring statehood.
- 1995: The U.S. government instituted a partial shutdown, closing national parks and museums.

Trains on Michigan Avenue. A skyline with no power. And how the hell does Navy Pier survive a partial societal collapse?

Wednesday's full trailer release for "Divergent," based on Chicagoan Veronica Roth's book of the same name, shows quite a bit of the city—but not the one we know and love. Here's some observations about "Divergent's" version of Chicago.

MSWASKO@TRIBUNE.COM

BACK TO CHICAGO'S FUTURE

How does the 'Divergent' trailer live up to the real-life city?

Zoe Kravitz and Shailene Woodley in "Divergent"

SKYLINE, SANS WATER 0:20

Well, this looks familiar. Sort of. We get the first glance of "Divergent's" Chicago. Who spilled a forest in the lake? The Willis is there, but it looks like Chicago got some more skyscrapers.

PIONEER COURT 0:25

It looks as though the Equitable Building on Pioneer Court plays a big role. From the looks of it, those are the five separate entrances for the factions in the film.

MICHIGAN AVENUE 0:28

The Mag Mile is ... a railway? Looks like it. That's the Wrigley Building behind the train. Obviously, they're all jumping off because their Ventra cards didn't work.

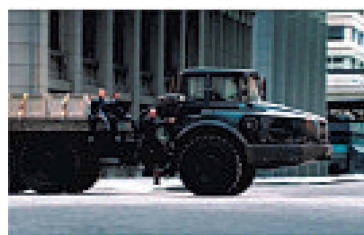

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO 1:09

U. of C. students should know this one well. It's the university's domed library. Study break, y'all.

ROOFTOPS 1:16

Yup, looks like the scene from the book where Tris tries to prove herself to Dauntless made the cut. Looks like it was filmed a little farther from downtown ... maybe on your friend's roof deck?

DOWNTOWN 2:02

It's tough to tell, but it looks like the "L" (look to the right) is still standing, at least from this shot of a big-ass dystopian truck rolling through downtown like it doesn't give an eff.

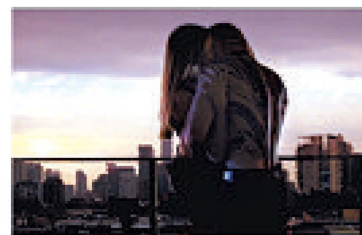

MORE NON-ELEVATED TRAINS 2:04

Where we're going, we don't need roads. Or at least not here. This is the second shot we've gotten of a road paved over in favor of a train.

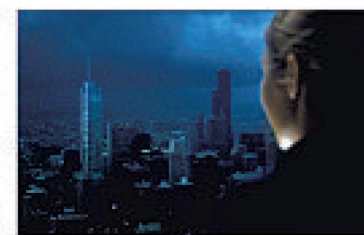

NAVY PIER 2:16

Unfortunately, in "Divergent's" world, Navy Pier is still standing. At least the Ferris Wheel is a cool thing to climb.

SKYLINE MAKEOUT 2:18

Makeout sesh in front of the skyline. It's tough to tell, but it looks like the Wills has all kinds of future-y crap attached to it.

DARK NIGHT 2:20

A quick shot of the skyline rounds out the trailer. We've got the Trump and Willis, but someone forgot to pay the electric bill.

'The Real World: Oh [BLEEP]'

Seven strangers, living together in a house... with their exes? It's "Real World: Ex-Plosion!" After 29 seasons, MTV has rejiggered its flagship show so that after four weeks, the housemates go on a day trip and return to find their exes are now living in the house too, ew.com reports. It's been a long, long time since we've watched an entire season, but something tells us it's time to tune back in. Wait, that's probably exactly what producers are hoping. Way to fall into the trap.

HOT DATE JULY 1, 2016

That's when "Independence Day 2" is now set to hit theaters, comingsoon.net reports. That's two days shy of a year from its original July 3, 2015, release date; two days shy of 20 years from the original's 1996 release; and two months shy of Will Smith's 48th birthday. However, it's not known if he's even IN the movie—scripts apparently have been written with and without his Capt. Steven Hiller included.

THE QUOTE

“It was like going to work every day in hell with Satan.”

—Mariah Carey, to Hot 97 radio, on her "American Idol" stint. Now, she didn't specify who exactly Satan was, but we have a few guesses.

WORST YEAR EVER?

Poor Zac Efron—first rehab, and now this. TMZ.com reports the "High School Musical" hottie broke his jaw after slipping in a puddle at his home. To add insult to injury, his jaw was wired shut as part of the healing process. Get well soon, dude—and watch out for banana peels.

HOT DATES

DEC. 6 AND 8

That's when Spike TV's new cooking competition, "Frankenfood," will host a casting call at Theatre Momentum, 1800 Cornelia Ave. For more information go to sharpenentertainment.com/casting/frankenfood.

Show time!

It's a big week for Tim Gunn and Maya Rudolph—they've both gotten new shows! The "Project Runway" mentor extraordinaire will host "Under the Gunn," which will feature "Runway" alums mentoring young designers in a new fashion empire, thr.com reports. It premieres at 8 p.m. Jan. 16 on Lifetime. And the former "SNL" star has been picked up for an NBC variety series that will begin as a special after the Winter Olympics, deadline.com reports.

Playboy on Wednesday released a preview photo from Kate Moss's upcoming pictorial in the magazine. It's been a long time since we've seen someone look less into a photo. The Moss sneak-peek pics will appear on the "Next Month" page of the December issue that hits newsstands Friday as a way to tease her full pictorial coming in January. The full Moss pictorial will appear in Playboy's 60th anniversary issue.
